Running a gut check on the plastic-bag ban

Reusable bags: Better for the environment, possibly worse for your health

By Michael Lansu | FOR REDEYE

When Chicago's new law restricting plastic grocery bags kicks in Saturday, it might be good for the environment, but questions loom about whether toting those reusable bags to the store could be bad for your health.

One study shows that a well-loved grocery store bag that is used—and reused and reused and, well, you get the idea—can harbor bacteria if not washed. Another study found that customers make different purchases—including picking up more unhealthy snacks—when they shop with reusable bags.

Last year, professors from Duke and Harvard universities released a study that found people who choose to bring reusable bags to the grocery store will buy organic produce, but also more junk food.

The study, “BYOB: How Bringing your Own Shopping Bags Leads to Treating Yourself, and the Environment,” examined what customers purchase when they bring bags to the store compared with when they do not.

“When people brought their own grocery bags to the store, and very few bring it 100 percent of the time, they ended up buying significantly more indulgent items,” study co-author Uma Karmarkar of Harvard University told RedEye. “They were treating the environment by bringing their bags, but also treating themselves by adding an extra cookie.”

Specifically, the study showed there was a 1.24 percent increase in the probability of purchasing an indulgent item when bringing your own bag.

The extra indulgences are the result of a psychological phenomenon known as the licensing effect, a likely unconscious process through which people indulge after making a decision they believe is virtuous, Karmarkar said.

Buying those extra cookies happens when shoppers choose to bring their own bags, not when the store or government requires it, Karmarkar said.

Indeed, the study was done in California when there were no such restrictions on plastic bags.

Beginning Saturday in Chicago, larger chain stores and franchises no longer will be allowed to use traditional plastic bags. The law does not yet apply to small businesses.

Some stores, including Jewel-Osco and Target, will switch to free, law-compliant plastic bags that are thicker and intended to be reusable.

Theo Williams puts groceries into a reusable bag in May 2014 at the Jewel-Osco at 370 N. Desplaines St. in Chicago. Jewel-Osco is among the stores switching to free, law-compliant plastic bags in reaction to Chicago's new plastic-bag ban, which goes into effect Saturday. BRIAN CASSELLA/TRIBUNE FILE able. While these bags will continue to provide shoppers with the plastic option, some believe they go against the spirit of the law.

It is unclear how Chicago's limited plastic-bag ban will affect shopping habits because other bag choices are still available, according to Karmarkar, who said that once bringing your own bags becomes the cultural norm, the indulgence purchases may stop.

“Nobody used to recycle bottles, and then recycling bottles was something you did because it was good for the Earth. ... We are almost at a point now where if you don't recycle your bottles and cans you feel bad,” Karmarkar said.

The Harvard-Duke study pointed to a 2011 survey of U.S. consumers that showed 29 percent had brought their own reusable bags to the store during their most recent shopping trip.

Outside the West Town Mariano's, Craig Sundstedt talked about the impending ban, saying he hates plastic bags and is glad the city is trying to ban them. He keeps reusable bags in the trunk of his car but doesn't always remember to use them.

“I'm against people leaving [bleep] around,” Sundstedt said as he motioned toward a plastic bag blowing down Chicago Avenue, outside the store.

Sundstedt, 64, of suburban Algonquin, said he doesn't shop any differently when he remembers to use his reusable bags.

Another Mariano's customer, 32-year-old Ukrainian Village resident David Greenstein, said that when he doesn't bring his own bags he requests paper bags because they're better for the environment and easier to carry.

But there is another potential downside to reusable bags.

A 2011 study by the University of Arizona and Loma Linda University found large amounts of bacteria in almost all bags and the dangerous E. coli bacteria—which can cause infections with symptoms that include stomach cramps, diarrhea and vomiting—in some used bags.

That same study, titled “Assessment of the Potential for Cross-contamination of Food Products by Reusable Shopping Bags,” found that meat juices often can contaminate the bags, which often are stored in the trunks of cars. Sometimes, the bags are also used to carry non-grocery items, which can also lead to bacteria.

The study found that reusable bags are rarely washed, and 8 percent of all bags tested had E. coli. The good news: Washing the bags kills 99.9 percent of bacteria, according to the study.

A farewell to plastic bags as we know them

The Second City
NETWORK

Chicago's so-called plastic-bag ban affecting big-box chain stores takes effect Saturday. While those rallying against the new law include consumers, environmentalists, retail employees and some pet owners (to be fair, only those pet owners who have the kinds of pets that poop), what's done is done.

And even though some retailers are saying they'll offer thicker plastic bags—legal because they're considered reusable—let's take a moment to say thank you and farewell to our friends, the departing old-school plastic bags.

Jewel bags

Oh, Jewel bag. I'll miss the way that no matter what I bought, be it a pack of gum or a single apple, I was given two of you. You always worked best doubled up, and that's what made you a true team player. You were also a favorite of grandmothers, who universally loved to wrap up containers of saucy food in you. Now how are they supposed to transport soup they don't trust not to leak?

Target bags

Remember how you got way thinner a little while back? Honestly, I preferred you with more meat on your bag-bones, but when I needed a bag to bring some stuff somewhere, you were still my preferred carryall, a classy step up from ...

Walgreens bags

No one ever saves you. You're the bag voted

Most Likely to Wind Up Living in a Tree. Basically, everyone hates you. Even Wes Bentley.

Treasure Island bags

"Paper or plastic?" Always an innovator, you made that question totally irrelevant by being a plastic bag with a paper one inside. Mind. Blown.

Once I brought you home, things just got more intriguing. Did you belong in my closet's big plastic bag of other plastic bags? Not really; you don't crumple the same way. How about filed among the stack of Whole Foods bags that I am definitely, absolutely going to find a use for, besides filling with non-Whole Foods food that I bring to parties to look fancier?

That felt weird, too. Truth be told, I don't know what box you belong in, bag(s). You're mysterious, and I love that about you.

Bed Bath & Beyond bags

I think I'll miss you most of all. What you lacked in discreetness you made up for with sheer size. You easily fit a Snuggie, a dish-drying rack and a salad spinner and still had room for a cotton-candy maker or two. Plus, you're the only bag that could handle the entire contents of a litter box being transferred into you, and that, my friend, was worth its weight in Tidy Cat.

There isn't a vessel big or strong enough to contain my tears as I bid adieu to these bags I hardly knew ... except maybe the larger, thicker plastic bags that big-box retailers soon will offer their customers instead, inevitably making a bigger environmental mess and costing consumers more. Luckily, you can't put a price on achieving total futility—and this ban's got that in the bag.

LAKEVIEW'S GREAT DEBATE

SOME NEIGHBORS FIGHTING RECOVERY RESIDENCE PLANS

By Leonor Vivanco | REDEYE

A proposal to open a counseling center and sober living residence in Lakeview hasn't won the support of its neighbors yet and faces an uphill battle from residents reluctant to welcome the project. Rockford, Ill.-based Rosecrance, a private behavioral health organization that has been in existence for nearly 100 years, wants to offer counseling and residential units for people recovering from substance abuse as well as outpatient services at 3701 N. Ashland Ave., a corner once eyed for luxury condos above commercial space.

It's the residential component, which requires a special use permit from the city, that is riling up Lakeview residents. An online petition posted by the Lakeview Action Committee in opposition to the recovery home has drawn more than 700 signatures; opponents also have attended community meetings.

The counseling center would be on the first floor while the second, third and fourth floors would have furnished apartment units for young adults, focusing on ages 18 to 29.

"We're doing this to serve a specific population that struggles in our community," said Phil Eaton, Rosecrance president and CEO, at a recent community meeting. "Providing this level of care, this structured sober living can be lifesaving for these individuals as they transition and start a life of recovery."

Rosecrance Lakeview would not be a detox center, halfway house or rehab facility, said Chris Yadron, director of Chicago recovery services for Rosecrance. Nobody would be held there involuntarily or receive medication such as methadone treatment, he said. Typical clients would be young adults from Chicago and the suburbs seeking an alcohol- and drug-free living environment for roughly $2,500 a month, he said.

Residents last week packed the Mercury Theater on Southport Avenue for a 2.5-hour community meeting, voiced concerns about safety and property values and raised issues of parking and of recovering residents loitering and smoking in the densely populated residential neighborhood.

Cary Keigher, 42, said his main concern was the safety of his family and neighbors, including the possibility of Rosecrance clients relapsing and driving under the influence or committing crimes such as theft.

"I can't say I'm opposed to the whole thing," he said after the meeting. "I want to hear what their policy is and what their plan of action is to address the safety issue and the health issue. The smoking thing is a very valid point."

Eaton had told him earlier that he can't guarantee his safety but would work as hard as he could toward that.

"It's hard not to be apprehensive about a response that doesn't give you any reassurance about safety," Keigher said.

Chris Yadron, director of Chicago recovery services for Rosecrance, stands Tuesday outside the building at 3701 N. Ashland Ave. where Rosecrance is hoping to open a counseling center and sober living residence focused on young adults ages 18 to 29.

LENNY GILMORE/REDEYE

The residents, who could number 20 to 30 at a time, would not be allowed to stay out past the 11 p.m. curfew or have overnight guests, Yadron said. They would have structured schedules and would be removed if they brought in drugs or alcohol.

Smoking is discouraged, Eaton said, but is not illegal. Although Rosecrance offers smoking cessation programs, he admitted they aren't terribly effective. Smokers would have to request to light up and would be allowed only in small groups, he said.

Loitering would not be permitted, and staff would address the issue if it arose, he said.

On site, there would be a total of 11 full-time staffers at varying hours and a private security firm manning the overnight shift, said David Gomel, Rosecrance's chief operating officer.

Residents would not have cars, and people seeking outpatient services would have to find public parking because the five parking spaces would be for staff.

Rosecrance detailed its admission criteria, which include participation in a 12-step program, recommendation from a sponsor, drug screenings twice a week and enrollment or the intent to enroll in a school or work training program. Potential residents would be excluded if they present a risk of sexual violence, among other criteria.

"We're not asking you to see the safety in your neighborhood diminish or decrease and then just put up with it because we believe in our mission and you should too," Yadron said. "We don't expect that to happen. We think safety should be upheld in the neighborhood."

At the meeting, residents also questioned what specific plans were in place to monitor and enforce such issues and what benefit such a facility would have for the community. They criticized Rosecrance for unsatisfactory answers and slammed them as being ill-prepared when they didn't get detailed answers to their questions.

"There's a fear of the unknown. Because a lot of people in recovery who are sober are actually—they're very private about that and not public about it," said Kelly O'Brien, executive director of The Kennedy Forum Illinois, a nonprofit composed of civic leaders advocating to end the stigma of mental health and substance abuse disorders.

"These aren't a group of people saying, 'We want to drink.' They're saying, 'We're going to be sober, not drinking and using,' and, to me, that's the best neighbor you can have," said O'Brien, who attended the Southport Neighbors Association meeting and hopes the majority of the greater Lakeview neighborhood will be more accepting and supportive of the project and the young adults who would live there.

Pushback from the community and the NIMBY mentality don't make someone in recovery feel welcome, she said.

"The danger of that conversation that happens in a room like that is not just Lakeview doesn't get a facility they greatly need, but the people that live in Lakeview and live in the state don't get the help they need because they're afraid," O'Brien said.

The fear is that they could get discriminated against or treated differently by others, she said.

Although some people relapse, she said, "The way you can help assure more people make it is by supporting them, not saying, 'We don't want you.'"

Only a few residents spoke in favor of the project, including Nancy Bank, 51, who lives five blocks away from the proposed project.

"I do think a facility like this offers us something," she said. "It offers us an opportunity to demonstrate to our children that we care about people who had an illness, who made mistakes, who are trying to recover, that we care enough to embrace them in our wonderful diverse community."

Bank's comments received a smattering of applause.

But Caroline Carey, 33, doesn't think the location is ideal for those in recovery, being a block away from a late-night bar and liquor store.

"It feels very disingenuous to keep saying we chose this based on location for safety when there are so many places in close proximity that you can go and drink, that it feels dangerous to them, to the residents in the facility," Carey, who lives a block from the proposed center, said after the meeting.

Rosecrance's Gomel addressed that issue during the meeting.

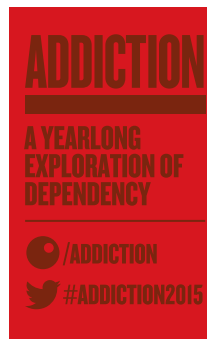

"These are kids who are going to college," he said. "These are kids who are going to live in dorms or in off-campus settings, and they're going to be faced with this temptation throughout the city of Chicago. There's not a neighborhood they can go to, there's not a college they can go to that they're not faced with this."

The special use permit request was scheduled to go before the Chicago Zoning Board of Appeals in August but was deferred a month at the request of Ald. Tom Tunney (44th), who has not yet stated a position on the project.

"My objective is to listen to the community," Tunney said. "I have my own personal feelings about it. I think they do good work, but the question is, is it the right fit for our neighborhood?"

The heat index is in the triple digits and you're seriously considering wearing a swimsuit to work. BEAR WEATHER GOT YOU READY FOR SOME FOOTBALL? Or at least fake training camp football?

You really can't be blamed if you're lacking excitement for Bear-bonnais. Hopefully your brain subconsciously purged all memory of the 2014 Bears from your mind. An optimistic fan may simply glance at that 5-11 record and think, "Coupla games here, coupla plays there and they could've been .500. Maybe better."

Stop yourself. They were the worst Bears team ever. So bad, the normally glacially paced franchise jettisoned both its general manager and its coaching staff in the same offseason for the first time ever! The Bears might as well be an expansion team.

Sure, you'll hear about John Fox's quick turnarounds in Carolina and Denver, where he eventually took flailing franchises to the Super Bowl (and lost). He'll get the Bears back to that magical month of January, no doubt. But it won't happen in Year 1. Not with this roster.

The NFL players vote on the Top 100 players in the league, and this year Chicago placed precisely one on the list (Matt Forte at 48).

It'll be ugly. But a productive kind of ugly, if you're the kind of sports fan who likes to "buy low" with your attention and time. And the ground floor is training camp, my friends.

WHAT YOU'LL SEE

The defense will look funny

And not in the tragicomic way of the last two seasons. The Bears will shift to a 3-4 scheme, meaning three down linemen and four linebackers will be the normal formation. Unfortunately, most of the players haven't played much in a 3-4 scheme. Lots of pre-snap pointing, yelling and confusion in August will hopefully lead to less post-snap pointing, yelling and confusion in September.

Contact at practices

Last year my former radio co-host Howard

GREAT, YOU'RE HERE

From a fan's point of view, Bears training camp mostly is about hoping everyone stays healthy and on the same page with the coaches. Beyond that, however, here are five new players who should have everyone talking from the jump.

If his "Madden 16" ratings are any indication, Jay Cutler's going to LOVE throwing to this guy.

HRONISS GRASU

Just listening to reporters try to pronounce his name correctly will be cringeworthy but entertaining in a twisted sort of way.

PERNELL MCPHEE

linebacker

The Bears want to make opposing quarterbacks as uncomfortable as possible. That was McPhee's specialty in Baltimore.

ANTREL ROLLE

safety

The longtime veteran has been a solid player his whole career. Question is, what does he have left?

Griffith noticed it right away: The Bears didn't do any running between the tackles. Ever. And they didn't let players "go to the ground," unless you count Martellus Bennett suplexing Kyle Fuller. Coach Fox won't grind up his guys like the old days; the NFLPA won't allow it. But there'll be at least some contact at practices, and the team seemed like it needed it last year.

An actual Bear, at least for a little while

Backup tight end Bear Pascoe is the second Bear in Bears history, after Papa Bear Halas. He may not make the final 53-man roster, but hey: actual Bear.

Matt Forte and Alshon Jeffery in contract years

Forte will be looking for one last big payday, and as a 29-year-old running back, he'll have to prove durability to get it, from the Bears or elsewhere.

Jeffery will be looking for his first mega-contract, and he'll probably get it from Chicago at the salary-cap expense of Forte in 2016. So wear those No. 22 jerseys while you can.

WHAT YOU WON'T SEE

Anybody left from the Super Bowl XLI roster

Other than kicker Robbie Gould, that is. Soon all we'll have left are the memories of Devin Hester's opening kickoff return and Peyton Manning throwing 37 check-down passes for first downs.

Ray McDonald in a Bears uniform

Thank God.

100 percent fewer hollow, corny locker-room slogan T-shirts and 80 percent fewer dropped passes now that Brandon Marshall's on the Jets.

Shea McClellin failing to adequately play defense in every way

Wait, what? He's *still* on the team?

STOP. WATCH.

Wednesday's must-see event in sports

Bears arrive at training camp | on local news

Chicago-area broadcasters make a big deal out of it every year. And you can't help but secretly love watching guys in T-shirts and shorts unpack TVs, recliners and giant canisters of creatine and carry them to their dorm rooms. Why? Because football is just over the horizon, gosh darnit.

ALSO ON TAP

- » Cubs vs. Colorado, 1:20 p.m. WGN
- » White Sox at Boston, 6:10 p.m. CSN

Any more sack celebrations from Lamarr Houston

Wait, what? He said he's still going to do it?!

Marc Trestman's face

And if none of that appeals to you, fret not: The Blackhawks' training camp hits South Bend, Ind., on Sept. 18.

The Astros may have created a monster. And not in an "of the Midway" sort of way.

1	Fill in the blank: Every Bears player's suitcase should include ___ for training camp.	An '85 Bears DVD. A little motivation couldn't hurt.	Exactly one 52-inch flat-screen TV.	Q-tips. Just in case they're having a problem listening.	"It's All Part of the 'Process': A Good Week at Practice" by Marc Trestman.	Sandals. Then the Bears might have a defense that can stop something, like foot fungus.
2	For his first Bears training camp, new coach John Fox should ...	... amp himself up by listening to throwback CDs of "Jock Jams." I recommend Volume 2.	... give out HBO Go passwords to win over the popular vote.	... oh, I don't know. Show them who's boss?	... join Lance Briggs in the one-year anniversary celebration of his restaurant, the Double Nickel Smokehouse.	... avoid any references to being a "Foxcatcher." Creepiest movie ever.
3	Pretend you're Theo Epstein calling to make a trade. What do you say?	"So you guys are probably going to want more for Cole Hamels now, huh?"	"Hey, this is Theo. Can you tell him we play night games, too?"	Pretend I'm Theo Epstein? How dare you.	"Cole Hamels for Starlin Castro straight up? I'll even throw in Jay Cutler."	"After Schwarber, Rizzo, Bryant, Soler, Almora and Baez, Starlin Castro has the most upside."
4	What's the best part about the Blackhawks being on national TV 21 times next season?	Another 21 games for bandwagon fans to claim they watched.	I know exactly which nights the Gold Coast will be a nightmare (all of them).	Twenty-one chances for people to see what a dynasty looks like on TV.	"Chelsea Dagger." Over ... and over ... and over again.	A Chicago team is finally getting Dallas Cowboy- and New York Yankee-level respect.
5	What was Taylor Swift thinking when the Astros moved her concert date in Houston?	Don't the Astros know that Band-Aids don't fix bullet holes?	Taylor Swift + victimized = NEW HIT RECORD!	She started doing her best Jim Mora impression. Playoffs?!	"And, Houston, now we have bad blood."	"I knew you were trouble when you walked in."

More flaws than fun in 'Vacation' reboot

FAST PAISED

Matt Pais

chicago.com
» @mattpais

Good thing the National Lampoon label no longer exists or there surely would be yet another poo-related joke in the brandless reboot of 1983's "National Lampoon's Vacation," assumedly bringing the tally into double digits. I'm not sure; I wasn't counting, as a comedy that even creates the idea of keeping track of something like that is all kinds of depressing.

It also makes you wonder how writers could sit down and say, "You know what would be hysterical here? If Rusty crashed into a cow and got cow parts all over him. And then another cow ate those guts." One of those writers/directors is Wheeling native John Francis Daley, who also wrote "Horrible Bosses" and "The Incredible Burt Wonderstone" and starred on "Freaks and Geeks." It's so incredibly sad that Sam Weir grew up with this sense of humor.

In a performance that takes the dweebiness of Andy on "The Office" and removes the charm, a relentlessly annoying Ed Helms stars as the grown-up version of Rusty Griswold. He unconvincingly wants to repeat the Chicago-to-California road trip of the original film—which had a few funny lines ("Kids, are you noticing all this plight?") but a gaping lack of subplots—with his wife (Christina Applegate) and two sons, whose running gag is that the awful younger one bullies the sensitive older one. Taking a route that suggests people leaving the Chicago suburbs somehow have to pass both The Chicago Theatre and Wrigley Field to get on the highway toward the West Coast, the Griswolds begin the 2,560-mile journey to Walley World in an Albanian car with cupholders on the outside. Seriously, this car is the movie's laughter MVP.

Most of the new, broad, sour "Vacation" feels like the worst moments of the John Hughes-scripted first movie, like when the family ate dog urine-coated sandwiches and Clark (Chevy Chase) made a black police officer behave like a dog. Now there's a gag about sorority girls thinking Asperger's is Assburgers, since no one's ever made that joke before. The midtrip stop with family, which formerly included cousin Eddie (Randy Quaid), this time involves Rusty's sister Audrey (Leslie Mann) and brother-in-law (Chris Hemsworth, the biological opposite of Quaid). The concept behind Hemsworth's character is that he's very attractive and has a giant penis. Just such inspired ideas.

It is pretty good when four different officers argue jurisdiction at the four corners joining Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado and Utah. But stupid-funny doesn't have to be repeated cracks about pedophiles and a giant ball of pubic hair. "Vacation" is at best the Wieners Circle of comedy: mean, cheap and probably a lot less gross when intoxicated.

NO-LAPALOOZA

FOOD AND BOOZE SPECIALS YOU CAN BENEFIT FROM THIS WEEK EVEN IF YOU'RE NOT GOING TO LOLLA

By Samantha Nelson | FOR REDEYE

Whether you couldn't afford the tickets, procrastinated until they sold out or just don't like fighting crowds to get to the next stage, you won't be among the 300,000 people descending on Grant Park this weekend for Lollapalooza. Luckily, while concertgoers are packing the fest's beer garden and Chow Town, these 10 bars and restaurants are offering deals to get you in the spirit—no wristband required.

The Gage

24 S. Michigan Ave. 312-372-4243

When: 11 a.m.-11 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday, 11 a.m.-midnight Friday, 10 a.m.-midnight Saturday and 10 a.m.-10 p.m. Sunday. The frozen Bacardi mai tai ($9) that has become a patio favorite at sibling spot The Dawson travels to the Loop this weekend. Served in a souvenir cup Friday through Sunday, the cocktail blends Bacardi 8, housemade orgeat, Clement rum agricole, lime juice and Cointreau poured from a frozen slushy machine. For a cool snack, try the Lolla-pop ($6, available Friday through Sunday), layers of orange, peach and raspberry sorbet with creamsicle filling served in a push pop-style tube.

Mott St

1401 N. Ashland Ave. 773-687-9977

When: 7 p.m. Wednesday and Thursday. Doors open at 6 p.m. No cover. Reservations required: info@mottstreetchicago.com The West Town restaurant's Mottapalooza patio party features acoustic covers and original tunes from Dan Jones on Wednesday and hip-hop beats from Simon Dufour on Thursday plus $1 spiked Motters pops, gin and tonic or a blend of aperol, grapefruit juice and Cardamaro frozen and served in a plastic tube.

Jimmy

610 N. Rush St. 312-660-7191

When: 3-5 p.m. Friday. Stop by David Burke's Primehouse's weekly summer pop-up ice cream shop for executive pastry chef Amanda Warren's Walk the Blue Moon float ($5), made with blueberry sorbet, berry-lemon soda, whipped cream and blue Pop

Rocks, which pays tribute to alternative band Walk the Moon and the oldie ballad "Blue Moon." For the pistachio crunch ($5), Warren takes the pistachio ice cream from the restaurant's current menu and folds in pistachio brittle and salted caramel sauce to celebrate singer Sam Smith. "I think he's just an amazing singer," she said. "I saw in an interview that his favorite ice cream flavor is pistachio."

Acanto

18 S. Michigan Ave. 312-578-0763

When: 11 a.m.-11 p.m. Friday and Saturday, 11 a.m.-10 p.m. Sunday. The Italian restaurant celebrates a different festival headliner each night with a special pizza and drink pairing. Friday you'll find a pie vocal vegetarian Paul McCartney would approve of featuring Calabrian chile, roasted eggplant puree, buffalo mozzarella, heirloom tomatoes and sweet basil ($18) paired with a glass of biodynamic red wine ($14). On Saturday, you can get a blood and sand cocktail ($11) to celebrate Metallica's hit "Enter Sandman," along with a pizza featuring blood sausage, roasted red onion, n'duja potato and mascarpone ($23). For Florence and the Machine on Sunday, the restaurant celebrates Italy's Florence region with a glass of white wine from the area ($12) and a pizza with Tuscan summer truffle, baby kale, gran mugello cheese and roasted garlic.

Embeya

564 W. Randolph St. 312-612-5640

When: 5-10 p.m. Friday and Saturday. Reservations recommended. The West Loop restaurant prepared a playlist featuring at least one song from every Lollapalooza artist, so you can get a tour of the lineup as you dine on a $55 three-course dinner including fried squid, udon noodles with braised artichoke and coffee ice cream with white chocolate mousse.

The Stretch Bar & Grill

3485 N. Clark St. 773-755-3980

When: 5 p.m.-2 a.m. Friday, 11 a.m.-3 a.m. Saturday and 11 a.m.-2 a.m. Sunday. Watch the spectacle broadcast with sound on the Wrigleyville bar's 15 TVs while taking advantage of specials including $5 mimosas and mason jar bloody marys Saturday and Sunday and a $20 package from 6-10 p.m. Friday including domestic bottles, well drinks and a cheeseburger with fries.

The Florentine

151 W. Adams St. 312-660-8866

When: 11 a.m.-10 p.m. Friday through Sunday. The JW Marriott's restaurant offers a bevy of food and drink specials inspired by festival performers. If you're sweet on Sam Smith, try the I'm Not the Only One ($9), vanilla gelato with pistachio cream, orange olive oil cake and whipped cream. Or toast to Paul McCartney with the margarita-like Live and Let Lime made with Maestro Doble tequila, which Lollapalooza creator Perry Farrell serves as spokesman for (both $13).

Old Town Pour House

1419 N. Wells St. 312-477-2800

When: 11:30 a.m.-2 a.m. Friday, 10:30 a.m.-3 a.m. Saturday and 10:30 a.m.-midnight Sunday. The Weeknd's "Can't Feel My Face" gets plenty of play at the bar, so they're celebrating the singer's appearance at Lollapalooza with a cocktail of the same name made with Grey Goose Le Melon, Vander Mill apple raspberry cider, lemon juice, Pimm's float and Red Bull. They also honor Metallica with Whiskey in the Jaro-O ($10), which blends Knob Creek rye, simple syrup, apple bitters, lemon and Avery Brewing Co.'s White Rascal witbier. Try one while watching and listening to a stream of the fest.

Mercat a la Planxa

638 S. Michigan Ave. 312-765-0524

When: Noon-midnight Friday and Saturday, noon to 11 p.m. Sunday. Try a different $12 special each day based on the fest's headliner starting with the Band on the Run, based on the Paul McCartney song, a cocktail blending Bacardi 8 with Carpano Antica vermouth, Amaro Montenegro, lime and ginger beer. Saturday is the Metallica-inspired Master of Peppers, a bloody mary spiced with cayenne-infused vodka and a shishito pepper rim. Sunday, get a taste of Florence and the Machine with the "Rabbit Heart," braised rabbit croquettes served with lemon truffle aioli, savory cabbage and rosemary.

Filini

221 N. Columbus Drive 312-477-0234

When: 2 p.m.-2 a.m. Friday and Saturday, 2 p.m.-midnight Sunday. Grab a seat on the patio and share the restaurant inside the Radisson Blu Aqua Hotel's signature Rad Blu for You sundae, which has been renamed the Blu Palooza and discounted from $11 to $9 in honor of the fest. The decadent treat includes six scoops of Marsala wine-flavored gelato blended with orange, lemon and crumb cake crumble and served in an oversized martini glass topped with raspberry coulis, sliced almonds and whipped cream.

THE QUOTE

"I sat in a car, a hot-boxed car—I thought that was a good idea—and got high. And then the next day it was like, 'What's up with the weed?' And once I'm there, it's over."

—Macklemore, on how he suffered a drug relapse in 2014. In an interview with Complex magazine, the rapper said that fame forced him back to old habits, according to vulture.com. He told the magazine that he stopped going to 12-step meetings and that he was burnt out. He eventually wanted to escape and relapsed with sleeping pills and marijuana. He sobered up for good when his fiancée became pregnant earlier this year.

Michelle might be back!

Netflix announced Tuesday that the Olsen twins are "teetering whether or not they'll be around" for "Fuller House." The duo's rep recently shut down talks of their returning to the show, saying they were focused on their current careers, according to variety.com. We hope they come back. It wouldn't be the same without them. And also, literally all of the other cast members are back. Literally.

THE DIGITS

8.1M

That's how many boxes watched the season finale of ABC's "The Bachelorette." The finale's rating came in at about 15 percent higher than last year, according to variety.com. We wonder how many Chicagoans tuned in to see their boy Nick Viall get booted off. Again. Welp.

3.5

Damn, girl. Don't go swimming with that ring on without a proper flotation device 'cause you'll drown. That's how many carats "Bachelorette" Kaitlyn Bristowe's ring is, according to usmagazine.com. The ring was handcrafted and also has 160 smaller diamonds and an entwined band all set in platinum.

Fingers crossed!

Who isn't part of the Marvel Universe nowadays anyway? Rachel McAdams confirmed in an interview with the L.A. Times that she's in talks to play the female lead in Marvel's "Doctor Strange," which will star Benedict Cumberbatch. She said, "It's still super-early days, and I don't know where that's gonna go, if it's gonna go anywhere at all." She also was once considered for Gwyneth Paltrow's role in "Iron Man," according to eonline.com. WHYYY DIDN'T SHE GET THAT? We digress. Good luck to her. We're sure "Doctor Strange" will be better than "True Detective." "Strange" is scheduled for release on Nov. 4, 2016.

Netflix hasn't made a huge mistake

Yeah, buddy! Netflix announced Tuesday that they are still planning on bringing back "Arrested Development" for a fifth season, according to ew.com. Ted Sarandos, Netflix's chief content officer, said, "It's a very long complex deal to make for these guys both because the talent is very busy and working on other shows, but also because the show is owned by Fox. ... It is our intent to have a new season of 'Arrested Development.' All the negotiations are underway." Woo-hoo. Let's just hope it's better than Season 4.
